How Philanthropists Can Support Indonesia Earthquake Relief

By Joan Allmaras, Philanthropic Services Specialist

Late last week, two successive earthquakes shook Indonesia. Nearly 100 people lost their lives, hundreds were injured and tens of thousands were displaced from their homes. Resources for recovery are already strained by the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic, and the area was still re-building after major earthquakes and tsunamis struck in 2018. Rescue workers have been responding to floods and landslides in other areas of the country, and two major volcanoes began erupting in early January, prompting mass evacuations.

For donors that are moved to help, but are unsure where to start, the non-exhaustive list below is provided as a resource. When recommending a grant, please indicate “Indonesia Earthquake Relief” as the purpose of your grant to ensure that the organization correctly designates your gift. We encourage donors to research all charities prior to entering a grant recommendation.

Center for Disaster Philanthropy (EIN 45-5257937)

The Center for Disaster Philanthropy’s Global Recovery Fund supports medium to long-term recovery efforts around the world, including natural disasters and humanitarian emergencies.

Give2Asia (EIN 94-3373670)

Give2Asia established the Indonesia West Sulawesi Earthquake Relief Fund to meet immediate and long-term needs in the affected areas. Give2Asia’s local partners are working to provide shelter, clean water, mosquito nets and personal protective equipment to minimize the risk of COVID-19 transmission in temporary shelters.

Islamic Relief USA (EIN 95-4453134)

Working in Indonesia since 2000, Islamic Relief USA continues to assist with long-term recovery from the earthquake and tsunamis in 2018. Now, the organization is focused on providing education facilities for children and food aid to displaced families.
